

Love Poem to Myself

I love you so much

You are my own precious being:
You light up my life and I cannot exist without you
There is nothing I wouldn't do for you,
You just have to tell me what you
Need, want and desire....

I am your eternal servant and cannot do enough for you
Because, my precious being, you are the source of everything
That makes life worth living

If there's anything that hurts you, and obstructs your light,
I will not entertain or hold truck with anything or anyone that does not
Interact with you in a loving kind way
I will not let you have to defend yourself or protect yourself in any way.

As my love awakens and deepens for you each day, in my new found tenderness towards you, my heart sometimes breaks when I realise how I had ignored your pleas for love though pain and hurt. It saddened me to think how I had even blamed and criticised you for the suffering that you showed to me. My tears however put paid the walls that I had put up against you. And now I know my arrogance was borne out of ignorance and now and for ever more I remain in the true knowledge of my love for you.

And therefore I will be your knight in shining armour and protect your honour, and allow your light to shine brightly, unhindered by anything
You are priceless, beyond measure, so nothing can compete with you, nothing is of greater value than you, my love.

My passion is like the sun, a furnace that burns brightly and fiercely honouring you in every way possible

My love for you is unending and pure and I will always be your intimate confidant.
Together, you and I will be a force to be reckoned with, because in the sovereignty of our being we become a beacon of light and love to nourish all those around.

By Meike Lawrence